GNLU: Trilateral Training Programme on “Investigation and Trials in Justice Delivery System”

Gandhinagar, April 23, 2018: The Gujarat National Law University (GNLU) in collaboration with Raksha Shakti University (RSU) and Gujarat Forensic Science University (GFSU) organized a three-day Trilateral Training Programme titled “Investigation and Trials in Justice Delivery System”. The Valediction Program was held today at GNLU Campus, Gandhinagar.

As the innovative crimes bring an everyday challenge to the society, all the three universities decided to structure a unique program which brings together multi-disciplinary expertise to serve the need of the day. Innovative Investigation Practices, Forensic Science and the Criminal Law together makes a remote assessment of the latest state and government court choices tending to the utilization of criminological science in the examination and trial of criminal cases. The criminal investigation requires vigilant and innovative techniques to solve typical criminal cases. Every scientific evidence gives a complete review and investigation of the applicable logical issues wrangled by the court in that specific case.

In his Welcome address Dr Bimal Patel, Director, Gujarat National Law University took the opportunity to share his experience as a Member, Law Commission of India and emphasized that linkages between science and law should be continuous and that their interdependence is static and proliferating. He expressed his deep gratitude to the partnering Universities for joining hands for such an innovative initiation which will benefit Field practitioners and Academicians alike. No other state in India has such three universities focusing on the law (GNLU), forensic science (GFSU) and police administration (RSU). He said that multi-disciplinary training is extremely useful in a criminal investigation. He announced that these three Universities will train the second batch of students in the second half of the year and keep running such programs on a regular basis.

The Director-General of Raksha Shakti University, Shri Vikas Sahay, spoke on the study and application of good investigation practices and aligned sciences for the welfare of the society and facilitating national and international scholarly and academic co-operation in various areas of the same.

The Director-General of Gujarat Forensic Sciences University, Dr J.M. Vyas highlighted on how Innovative Forensic Skills can solve the real-time crime and helps in taking quick actions based on the scientific facts. The police and courts can be benefitted by conducting of such interdisciplinary
