

NATIONAL LAW STUDENTS' CONFERENCE 2010

The Center for Public International Law (CPIL) at Gujarat National Law University announced the inauguration of a new center entirely dedicated to public international law on Sunday 3rd of October at Gujarat National Law University. With this noble mission the CPIL thought of conducting the first conference on international law.

Center for Public International Law (CPIL) in its noble mission and motivation decided to act as a center for learning and research in the progressive development of public international law. In order mark the inauguration of CPIL, a one day national level conference was proposed and had been initiated along with the inauguration, with special emphasis on International Courts and Tribunals.

The aim of this one day national students' conference is two-fold; one, the official launch of Center for Public International Law (CPIL) and, second, to hold the first national conference under the aegis of the center on INTERNATIONAL COURTS AND TRIBUNALS: INDIAN / ASIAN PERSPECTIVE.

The CPIL felt the imminent need seeing the international adjudication of disputes which have now become a global phenomenon from ad hoc tribunals to permanent adjudicatory missions respecting the indispensable need of the international legal order and legal system. These adjudicatory functions have now become integral components for the functioning of the multi-lateral legal norms of globalization.

This conference wishes to bring legal issues concerning international adjudication of disputes in a wide array of themes including the system of international court of justice, international administrative tribunals, international criminal tribunals and other adjudicatory bodies of international trade regime.
