organise

Joint National Seminar on Police Structuring – Enhancing Lean and Effective Institution

under the aegis of

Police Academia Interaction Forum (PAIF)

Monday, August 13, 2018

Introduction

The primary role of police is to maintain law and order, investigate the crime and to contribute towards a safe and secure Society. Safety and security of the society and the welfare of the people critically depends upon the efficient functioning of the police institution as a whole. Efficiency and effectiveness can largely be achieved through enhanced equipping the forces with personnel, weaponry, forensic, communication and transport support and other related developmental aspects. Lack of proper training, poor police to population ratio and long working hours, among others, feature heavily as challenges in the police force.

Effective and efficient performance of police force remains a major demand of the Society and several committees (Ribiero Committee 1998-99, Padmanabhaiah Committee – 2000, Malimath Committee – 2003, among others), since independence, have contributed towards the achievement of this objective in the form of studies and recommendations. However, lack of full and effective compliance of all recommendations remain a major challenge and cry for the government and the police force alike. Several factors contribute to this state of affairs. Nevertheless, rising to the contemporary developments and challenges as effectively as possible with limited resources, can and should remain continuous working motto. The present seminar precisely aims to take stock of broad challenges and make feasible recommendations to the government and also assess the impact of recommendations made earlier.

Objectives of the Seminar

- To prepare a list of all primary and secondary duties performed by the police.
- To prepare a list of non-core duties that can be outsourced

- To understand insights into the multiplicity of decision making levels and to assess the value addition at each decision making level and identify redundancies
- To identify the levels at which recruitment should take place in police.
- To identify scope of infusion of technology in police structures and system to act as a facilitator as well as force multiplier.
- To identify means to facilitate engagement of domain experts with police.
- To suggest measures to improve training of police officers.
- To identify the areas where multitasking can be introduced.
